

DARTMOUTH FOOD FESTIVAL COVID STATEMENT

We have all been impacted by the coronavirus pandemic and our lives may never be quite the same and a new normal is evolving.

All of us at The Dartmouth Food Festival are aware of the profound affect this crisis is having on the food and hospitality sectors as well as the wider economy and our town and we want to do our bit by staging the 2021 Festival.

It is important to emphasise that although we are full steam ahead with planning of the Festival in its usual format this October, the Dartmouth Food Festival Team continue to monitor government guidance. Our priority is to deliver a safe Food Festival to all of our stakeholders.

We are currently exploring alternative scenarios that might be forced upon us in the event that the current emergency extends further into the year. Of course, as we progress, we hope to be able to provide more certainty but for now we must reserve the right to change the format, size and if required, cancel the Festival. All of our decisions will be driven by prevailing guidance and law.

In the meantime, stay safe and keep in touch with us. We are all working remotely from our respective homes for the foreseeable future but can be reached by email, or you can check out our social media channels.
